

IOWA DOMESTIC VIOLENCE HOMICIDE FACT SHEET

FISCAL YEAR (FY) 2022 to 2024

IOWA COALITION AGAINST
DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

At the Iowa Coalition Against Domestic Violence,

we believe domestic violence is a preventable public health issue and that all Iowans deserve a life free from violence. We work alongside a statewide network of victim service provider agencies, connect survivors to the help and services they need, and advocate for policy and community change that makes Iowa safer for everyone.

Our long-term goal is to end the threat of violence for everyone in our state. Feeling physically, mentally, and emotionally safe are basic human rights that every person and child deserves. When anyone in the community experiences violence, it affects the collective health of the entire population.

This fact sheet draws on publicly available data sources, including the Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) Program in Iowa as well as news and media coverage of homicides in our state. We acknowledge the inherent limitations in the data, as disclosures from victims are often fragmented or incomplete. This is due not only to the compounding effects of trauma but also to the reality that many crimes — particularly those involving women, children, and other vulnerable populations — go unreported.

Even with limited data, we know that at least 88 people in Iowa lost their lives to domestic violence between October 1, 2021 to September 30, 2024. Additionally, these numbers add to the 357 deaths tracked by the Iowa Attorney General's Office DV Fatality Chronicle from January 1, 1995 to September 30, 2021. At least 445 lives have been lost in Iowa since 1995 due to domestic violence. These numbers underscore an urgent public health concern that has claimed too many lives already.

NOTE: ICADV selected to begin Iowa's domestic violence homicide analysis on October 1, 2021, and will rely on our organization's methodology in reporting data moving forward. We refer to the Iowa Attorney General's Office DV Fatality Chronicle data from 1995-2021 to gain a broader understanding of domestic violence homicides in the state of Iowa over the past three decades.

Types of Violence

Domestic Violence (DV)

In this fact sheet, the term domestic violence (DV) is used as an umbrella term to describe all forms of violence that occur within intimate or familial relationships. DV differs from random or stranger violence in that it is rooted in interpersonal dynamics, relationships, power, and control.

Intimate Partner Violence (IPV)

Within this category, intimate partner violence (IPV) refers specifically to violence between current or former romantic partners. IPV can take many forms, including physical, emotional, sexual, or economic abuse, and it is the most common context for the homicides reported here.

Family Violence

A separate but related category, family violence, captures situations where children, parents, siblings, or other relatives are killed in the context of IPV. In these cases, their deaths are directly linked to violence between intimate partners. For example, a child who is killed during an incident of IPV, or a parent who becomes a casualty of their child's abusive relationship, are both considered victims of family violence. This, in turn, becomes part of the larger data set of domestic violence in our state.

Together, these categories illustrate the wide-reaching and often devastating impact of domestic violence, extending beyond the intimate relationship itself to harm entire families and communities.

Iowa has experienced a year-over-year increase in domestic violence homicides — 23 in FY 2022, 30 in FY 2023, and 35 in FY 2024 — marking the highest levels in recent history and a 52% increase over three years. Of the 88 homicides tracked during this period, 57 (65%) were carried out with a firearm. These alarming trends demand system reform, including stronger public policies and coordinated action to address the deadly role of guns in domestic violence.
